Capitol Cadillac Plans to Grow; Green Space Issue Dismays City

by Judy Bell

The Greenbelt City Council, still intact, with Mayor Judith Davis presiding and Rodney Roberts installed as the newly-elected mayor pro tem, met for a work session on November 14, where they heard a follow-up presentation by representatives from Capitol Cadillac.

At the regular city council meeting on October 8, Capitol Cadillac had discussed expanding its business to include an adjacent property to be leased from the state. (City Manager Michael McLaughlin is currently pursuing answers from the state on Greenbelt's rights in this matter.) In addition, council had voted to oppose special county legislation on behalf of Capitol Cadillac that would have bypassed necessary rezoning for this projected expansion. That legislation has since been withdrawn and a revision plan formulated.

James Soltesz, president and CEO of Loiderman Soltesz Associates, gave an initial presentation, remarking that the major issues of setback requirements and landscape areas on the adjacent property have been addressed. The requests for a natural vegetation buffer augmented with natural plantings, keeping a wide buffer around the property, as well as the request for internal green space, are shown in a revised plan distributed at the meeting. The banner that had been offensive to Davis has been taken down. The request to preserve the existing ruins and vegetation has been honored, as well as provision for a landscaped seating area with a commemorative plaque. (The site was the location of an old farmhouse.)

Although most of the comments made by council during the session were objections and suggestions for further revisions, no consensus was reached on their position concerning the proposal. However, their position on green space was made abundantly clear: they're for it.

Alternative Uses?

Councilmember Tom White stated that his preference for the property would be as "a city acquisition or to keep it as it is. I'm not thrilled with a Capitol Cadillac extension. Several of the tenants in the office buildings and the leasing agents...have indicated that the presence of the car dealership is one of the factors that makes it difficult to find tenants at that particular site."

Andre Gingles, an attorney representing Capitol Cadillac, commented that "We are probably the only entity that sees value in the property because of the adjacency to the property." Daniel Jobe, president of Capitol Cadillac, concurred.

Councilmember Alan Turnbull remarked that, "Everyone on the council has always had a concern for preserving as much green space as remains in the city...but it's not a mindless reactionary protection of open spaces, it's a strategic one...it's one that I think all of us also agree shouldn't be the only driver, because to have open space and to have the economy stagnate and the tax

Roosevelt Center Forum II Reveals Continued Concern

by Barbara Young

"In the over-60-year history of Greenbelt, never have so many resources and so much police patrol been dedicated to Roosevelt Center. All of the measures will be continued until a marked improvement in the quality of the Roosevelt Center environment is obtained." This was the vow contained in a written mission statement distributed to the audience by Patrol Commander Lt. Thomas Kemp, at the November 13 public forum held to discuss problems at Roosevelt Center, particularly with young people.

Conducted by Police Chief James Craze, the forum was held in the Community Center and attended by about 75 people, mainly adults. Mayor Judith Davis and several councilmembers were present, as were members of the Public Safety Committee and police staff in addition to Kemp, as well as representatives of city departments.

In introductory remarks, Craze explained that police resources were limited. He told the audience, "Life in the Center hasn't changed since the 1970s, when I came to work here. . . . What has changed, is that people are less tolerant of each other. . . . I'm often asked why we don't do something about the Center, but there really aren't enough of us to be in the Center all the time. And when we are there, sometimes people don't act up."

A serious but good-natured audience, filling the multi-purpose room, took turns talking, frequently about the bad language used by young people in the Center. One resident said the main difference these days is that today, bad language is being used "in a place where families go, where little children go, and it doesn't mesh." In his opinion, "If you want to use that kind of language, you are free to do it, but not necessarily in the center of town where people come with their families."

He cited an example: "I was with my four-year-old niece, and a fellow was riding a bike around the Center. It was pretty dark, so I walked up to him and asked, 'Would you mind not riding your bike in here?' He said, 'It's my bike, and I'm gonna ride it.' I said 'No, you're not,' so he jumped on the bike and started riding around in circles. I called the police and 20 minutes later, an officer showed up. The officer said, 'I'm confiscating this bike.' Then I realized I was alone with my niece."

"My view is that I shouldn't have had to call the police to make sure that my niece wasn't

Stabbing Suspect Caught After Chase through City

by Barbara Young

The story of how five police vehicles and four non-police vehicles got damaged on November 19 is related to how a young Greenbelt man came to be in intensive care as this story is written, November 19.

On Saturday night, November 17, at about 6:45 p.m., George Daffan, 18, of Greenbelt, was arguing with another man as they walked near the Center underpass. The man stabbed Daffan in the stomach and fled the area on foot. Daffan was taken to Prince George's Hospital, where he underwent surgery on Sunday.

On Monday, November 19, a Greenbelt Police detective saw the suspect walking across the parking lot of the Beltway Plaza

Shell station on Greenbelt Road with a shotgun in his hands. As the detective drove up, the suspect stole a white Trans-Am and drove off.

Police broadcast a lookout, and a Greenbelt officer saw the suspect driving east on Route 193. According to city police, a chase ensued as he drove around old Greenbelt a little after 1 p.m., striking several vehicles including an occupied police cruiser, and eventually going through the parking lot at St. Hugh's Church to Braden Field. About 20 St. Hugh's girls were playing soccer nearby as the man drove onto the field at a high rate of speed. At

City in Search of Bank To Sublease in Center

by Elaine Skolnik

In an effort to prevent the Bank of America from closing its branch in Roosevelt Center, the City of Greenbelt in August, following an initial contact by resident Bill Souser, appealed for help in August from the Governor's Office of Business Administration and Small Business Assistance (OBA). Although the bank closed its branch operation on Friday, November 16, except for the ATM machine, concerted efforts by the city and the state agency are moving forward to find another bank willing to occupy the now-vacant facility.

According to Bank of America's Small Business Executive Bob Barnes, the bank appears willing to "entertain subleasing" its facility. The bank's lease will expire in 2004. Barnes noted that many area banks have been contacted to determine their level of interest in the Roosevelt Center location. "We are continuing discussions with at least two of them . . . their names will be released at the appropriate time," he said, adding, "We are trying to do this as soon as possible - in the next 30 to 60 days; we don't want to lose the momentum."

Barnes and Greenbelt City Manager Michael McLaughlin told the News Review that they were "cautiously optimistic" about the outcome. They observed that, because the loss of the Bank of America branch in Roosevelt Center significantly affected the center, the local community's lifestyle and how residents do business, it was imperative that another bank move quickly into the facility.

McLaughlin explained that, in addition to contacting a number of other banks over the past several months, the city requested assistance from U.S. Senator Paul Sarbanes, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. Copies of the letter to Sarbanes were sent to State Senator Leo Green and delegates Mary Conroy, James Hubbard and Joan Pitkin.

Senior citizens protested vigorously after the August announce

Letters to the Editor

THANKS

Thank you for returning me to the City Council for a third term. It is a great privilege to serve my community in this way, and a responsibility that I take seriously. My pledge is to protect Greenbelt's legacy, and that means asking questions, bringing new issues to the table, and striving to have our city be a progressive, innovative, and involved community of neighbors. I always look forward to hearing from anyone with a problem to solve or an idea to share; please call me at 301-982-6460 or email turnbull@greenbelt.com.

Alan Turnbull

THANKS

This is to thank my friends and good neighbors for all their good deeds in helping with my leaves and also helping to celebrate my birthday.

Bless you all for being so nice to me. I really appreciate it. Love to all.

Martha Kaufman

How Safe Are We?

This cowardly act against my cousin [stabbing] has shocked the community and made [people in] the Roosevelt Center think that if this could happen right under our noses, how safe are we? Justice will prevail as the person who did this is caught and punished to the fullest extent of the law. When this can happen so close to home, how are we going to handle it if it strikes us? George, please get well soon!

Travis Eddins

Flu Shots Covered

Despite what the flu shot provider asserted at the November Health/Wellness Fair at the Greenbelt Community Center, flu shots are covered (paid for) by Medicare Part B. Medicare forms are available by calling Trailblazer at 1-800-444-4606. Forms should be submitted with flu shot provider receipts for reimbursement.

Larry Lates

(Note: Medicare will reimburse up to $15 once a year for any flu shot received by a medical practitioner if the recipient of the shot submits a completed form and a receipt to HCFA-Trailblazer Health Enterprises, LLC. If a blank form is available, it may be photocopied for use. The flu shot provider used by the city for the health fair, Alternacare, PC, provides services to employers and employees and is not a recognized provider for Medicare. Therefore, it cannot bill Medicare for reimbursement of its services and must charge for the shots. However, Medicare will reimburse the patient for covered services performed by any qualified medical practitioner up to the amount Medicare approves for a service.)

School Security

Parents of children at all schools are invited to a presentation on school security at the Eleanor Roosevelt H.S. PTSA Meeting. The meeting will be at ERHS on November 28 at 7 p.m.

base disappear would be unfortunate." Davis also expressed concerns regarding green space and the view of the property from the Beltway.

Councilmembers said they thought that only one additional building had been proposed, but Jobe countered that two buildings had always been planned -- one for Hummer and one for Pontiac GMC. He stated further that if another location can't be found, "We would lose the two new franchises." In responding to a query from Davis, Jobe stated that Capitol Cadillac has no plans to leave the site.

Speaking to the value of the property, White commented "The city council is...the custodian of corporate Greenbelt and the more open space the more value."

Roberts spoke in turn, addressing the state neighborhood conservation plan for Greenbelt Road. "Its value will show more when we start looking...to increase the open space along Greenbelt Road to make it look nicer."

Davis chimed in: "It provides a visual break that is very pleasant when you still have green next to a major highway."

Gingles' response was that "We will try to do as much as we can to address the green issues."

Councilmember Ed Putens expressed concerns about the placement of the planned buildings, and their possible realignment.

Summing up, Davis admonished the Capitol Cadillac representatives that council is not yet ready to go ahead, but "We are still listening and we're glad you're listening to us." An additional meeting is planned.

hit by a bicycle." The speaker concluded, "I think we have to take resources away from something else, or move the young people away from the Center."

A young person responded to the story by saying, "I understand about the language and everything... I'm a 23-year-old man, and I work full-time, and I notice the language, but pretty much I'm saying I don't want them [young people] looked at like animals, to be thrown out of the Center. People need to come together a little more..."

Another speaker said: "The problem is not with kids in this room tonight—the problem is with people using the Center for small drug deals."

Roosevelt Center businessman Daniel Kim spoke in favor of some sort of counseling system—giving young people an hour's counseling "to take note of their problems and help them get a job if needed."

Youth Programs

Several young skateboarders were present, and Police MPO John Rogers described the work he is doing with them to help establish a city skate park.

Konrad Herling noted that although there are a lot of programs for city young people, "We haven't looked at the youth that are not that keen about joining an organized effort." He added that the Arts Center is trying to hire someone to teach a youth drama class and speculated that "It might be time for the merchants to get together and contribute to the cost of additional security in the Center."

The discussion turned to rules at the Youth Center, and the possibility of posting some similar rules of behavior for people in Roosevelt Center. A young person, "Lucky," who spoke often at an earlier meeting held in the Center, spoke often at this forum as well. Calling himself "the eyes and ears of the city," he said he believed since the police have been visiting the Center more often, the bad language is less.

He said that "although the young people don't understand the history of Greenbelt, it's not as bad as you think, and it's getting better. Outsiders are leaving, slowly but surely. But the young people still don't understand how littering and loitering will destroy the businesses. I think police are doing all that they can, but maybe there should be a sub-station right in or near the Center."

Former city council candidate Kelby Brick spoke in favor of setting up a youth leadership group to teach communications skills and encourage leadership. Several speakers commented on the Center's attractive appearance, and their feeling that young people hanging out there are taking away the possibility of peaceful enjoyment by others. Many speakers deplored the profane language and lack of respect shown adults in the Center.

Businessman Chef Lou of Chef Lou's Desserts sounded discouraged as he talked of the activity going on outside his place of business. He said enforcement was needed.

At the conclusion of the forum, Chief Craze said he planned to hold another meeting in the future to continue gathering ideas from residents and young people.

Homeowners Share Cultural Celebration

by Ferdinand Johnson

On Saturday, September 22, the Greenspring Homeowner's Association held their annual cultural and family day at the Greenspring Neighborhood Park on Greenbury Drive. This year the celebration focused on the traditions and culture of African countries that reflect the heritage of community members.

Families representing Nigeria, Ghana, Cameroon, Liberia, Guinea and Eritrea participated wearing traditional and folk dresses. They also had craftwork and artifacts representative of their various cultures. Members from Nigeria and Ghana spoke about the history and culture of their countries and people. The high point of the day was the sampling of a variety of tasty indigenous dishes from these countries -- like Jollof, Waachye, Kakro, Kenkey, Gari Foto, Check Rice, Engera Thebhi, Tooboi and Moin Moin. The activities of the day were supported with background hi life and juju music. In addition there were games and prizes for the kids.

Over fifty members of the community attended. The Mayor of Greenbelt, Judith Davis, and councilmembers Edward Putin and Thomas White also attended. The mayor handed out an award to the owner of 8110 Craddock Rd. for winning the association's 2000 Landscaping Contest.

In these trying times, stay close to home for the New Year and celebrate with family and friends. There will be music, magic, clowns, "get-involved" activities, a theatrical production and much, much more. The one thing that the committee could use, however, is more volunteer participation. The next meeting is Tuesday, November 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Center. Stop in and become a member of this creative group or call Patti Brothers at 301-982-2312. Discounted tickets for the celebration will be on sale at the Community Center office starting Monday, November 26.

A Meteoric Night At Northway Field

by Mary Moien

Where were you at 5 a.m. on Sunday November 18? About 150 Greenbelters were at the Northway field looking for meteors. They came down the pitch-dark road mainly by car, but some came by foot and some by bike. And there were all ages, including many children. Although the meteor shower may not have been as visible in the Washington area as hoped for, oohs and ahs were heard across the field as many shooting stars were glimpsed coming from all directions.

From an unscientific point of view, sky watchers were treated to two types of visions - shooting stars and shooting stars with long tails that seemed to linger in the sky. As Greenbelters waited for the next star to appear, there was time for hot drinks and socializing in the dark. One resident commented that he should have set up a hot coffee stand, as the night was quite chilly. But mainly the night was filled with sounds of "There's one," "Where?" And "Whoops, already gone." Then, residents straggled off to search for the warmth of car or home. For those who missed it, there will be another meteor shower of this magnitude in 2099, so mark the calendar.

Carl Taylor Bond

Carl Taylor Bond, 81, of Greenhill Road, died on November 15, 2001 at Villa Rosa Nursing Home, Mitchellville after complications from a stroke.

Born May 27, 1920 in Providence, Rhode Island, he was raised in New Hampshire. In 1937 he took part in a Boy Scout Jamboree on the Mall in Washington D.C. made famous by the Michigan Governor's complaint about the youth wearing shorts in public, especially on the mall. He vowed to come back to Washington one day to work for his beloved country.

He graduated from high school in Bristol, New Hampshire in 1938. In 1941 he graduated from Bryant College, Providence, Rhode Island with a degree in business administration.

After the Pearl Harbor attack, he enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Corps where he received his officer's training. Mr. Bond took part in the campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, and France. He remained in the Army Reserves, retiring in 1962 as a strategic intelligence officer with the rank of Major.

He returned to the states and enrolled in Haverford College, graduating in 1948 with a B.A. degree in economics. Mr. Bond attended graduate school at Boston University, earning a master's degree in economic geography and an M.B.A. in international trade and marketing.

While in Boston he met his wife Ruth in the Harvard St. Co-op House in Cambridge, Mass. They were married November 25, 1950 in Newton Highlands, Mass.

Mr. Bond's career was in economic development with the states of New Hampshire and Michigan before coming to Washington, D.C. in 1962 to work in the United States Department of Commerce. He retired in 1985. While at Commerce he served as the economist on a long-range United Nations economic development mission to Venezuela, was assigned to the Alaskan field office for aid to interior Alaska communities while the pipeline was being built, and carried out other special assignments in Puerto Rico, the upper Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountain areas.

Prior to this service, he was project officer with the Economic Development Administration's Office of Public Works for four years and area planner with the Area Redevelopment Administration for three years.

Ah, Thanks-Giving!

Even after the September Massacre, I am thankful for the sense of PEACE found in Greenbelt. Lake Park. Research Road. The top of Lastner Lane (especially at sunset) are gifts of nature and planning. And there are more such locales here.

I am thankful for associations with people of goodness. Catholic Community. Friends of the Greenbelt Museum. Great Greenbelt Volksmarch Club. I feel honored to be associated with you.

Most of all I am thankful for God and for His Son Jesus Christ. Thank you for your gift of a future worth looking forward to. Thank You for "go(ing) to prepare a place for (us)"... John 14:2.

Thank you in faith for your promise of the coming world at peace: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation. Neither shall they train for war anymore." (Micah 4:3).

Let us give thanks for times now and time to come.

Greenbelt's Business

Beltway Plaza/Lions Collect for Needy

Local organizations and businesses have joined forces to collect new toys for needy children in Prince George's County. The organizers of this task, Beltway Plaza Mall and the Greenbelt Lion's Club, are now in their tenth year of this endeavor. The goal once again is to distribute over $20,000 of new toys to families, orphanages, churches and hospitals with children who would not ordinarily receive a gift during the holidays.

Kicking off the drive, the tenth annual Toy Drive Parade at Beltway Plaza Mall was held on November 17, in front of the mall. The Redskinettes, DC Show Biz Dancers, acrobats, German Gym Wheel unicyclists, Blues Clues, local bands, Stiltwalking Uncle Sam and Statue of Liberty, and Life Size Puppets were some of the parade participants. Santa and Mrs. Claus arrived, ringing in the holiday spirit.

Following the parade inside the mall a wide variety of entertainment included face painting, temporary tattoos, balloon sculpting, juggling, Tom Lily and Wonderbunny Magic Show, and a puppet show. The Redskinettes were on hand to sign autographs.

Toys will be collected in the bright green and red toy box off Center Court of the mall till December 20 and then will be sorted and distributed by the Greenbelt Lions Club. A Jeppers! pass will be given to anyone giving a toy worth $10 or more. Donation boxes will also be located at Windsor Green, Chevy Chase Bank, Sir Walter Raleigh, Greenbelt Consumer Co-op, Greenbelt Aquatic Center, and Greenbelt Community Center.

The merchants of Beltway Plaza are also donating food to needy families this Christmas holiday. Shoppers may enter to win $400 worth of free groceries from Giant, and Beltway Plaza will donate a free Christmas dinner to a needy family in their name. There will be five dinners given. Shoppers may also enter to win a free turkey from Giant and the merchants will donate a free turkey to a needy family in their name as well. There will be 50 turkeys given out to needy families.

Safeway Contributes Millions to Red Cross

Safeway Inc. announces that it is making a donation of approximately five million dollars to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief effort to aid victims of the September 11 terrorist attacks. Through the generosity of its customers and employees, the supermarket chain raised approximately four million dollars at checkstands and is contributing more than one million dollars from its matching funds and proceeds from the sale of American flags and lapel pins.

Safeway earlier announced that it would cover the pay differential and extend full benefits for all employees serving in the military reserve who are called to active duty for Operation Enduring Freedom. The company will cover the compensation and benefits for active duty reservists for the full term of their active service.

With more than 100 stores in the metropolitan Washington, D. C. area, including six in Arlington, Safeway also contributed many thousands of dollars in supplies to rescue workers and relief organizations at the Pentagon in the immediate aftermath of the September 11 tragedy.

Beauty in Your Own Backyard

As the fall approached and the color of the leaves slowly, but so intensely began to change, I was thinking of taking a day trip to Luray, Virginia. Or maybe up to Sugarloaf Mountain to take in the beauty of it all. But, with the busy lives we lead in this day and age, it seemed like every weekend something came up and we never got the chance to take our nature fix. One Tuesday morning I had to be at work at 10 a.m. so I thought I would take a walk around Greenbelt Lake. When I got there the first thing I saw was a huge flock of geese spread out all over the hill near the picnic table area. They were quiet, beautiful and minding their own business. So I decided to walk slowly over to a table and sit down. They didn't seem to mind. I sat there about 10 minutes just watching their beauty and grace. Next, on my walk I came upon the ducks and swans, not to mention all the other wild birds and squirrels (they are so much fun to watch). After the walk, I sat down on a bench next to the water and looked over the lake. The sun was bouncing off the water and beaming on the trees across the lake. It was one of the most grateful moments of my life. It was then that I realized I never had to go far to see the beauty of the season. All the time it was right in our own backyard. I will never take Greenbelt for granted.

Public input is sought before the operating budget is delivered to the Board of Education. Two forum dates and locations are as follows: Tuesday, November 27

one point, police said, the children had to run to avoid being struck.

Two police cruisers rammed the car in the effort to stop the driver. One police officer left his cruiser in the middle of Braden Field and ran on foot toward the car. The suspect allegedly drove toward him, and the officer fired several shots. No one was struck by bullets, and the suspect surrendered.

The suspect is identified by police as David Michael Fetrow of College Park. Fetrow has been charged with attempted first degree murder, four counts of first degree assault, concealed deadly weapon, openly carrying a deadly weapon and theft, according to MPO George Mathews, Greenbelt police. He faces further charges from other police jurisdictions. Fetrow appeared before a District Court Commissioner, where he was ordered held without bond pending trial.

An eyewitness to the Braden Field chase was Tom Colihan of Berwyn Heights who was playing tennis on the Braden courts. He reported, "A teacher had the children huddled on the bleachers, and the guy driving missed them by about 30 feet. The scary thing about it all was these kids."

Thanksgiving Revisited

Thanksgiving had always been a special holiday in our family. Relatives far removed somehow managed to come together at my grandmother's homestead for the annual feast of food, the breadth of which defied logic. In hindsight, thankfulness seemed to be overtaken by overindulgence and sheer waste.

It has been some time since my family followed those traditions of the past. With more understanding and wisdom (some might say cynicism) under my belt, I find the holiday actually quite troubling. Without delving too deep, it is fairly clear at this stage in our history that the romantic notion of quaint pleasantries between the pilgrims and native Americans is inaccurate.

This misinterpretation is enough to sour my continued patronage. But I have also come to the realization that the designation of one day in the year to give thanks is hypocritical. One day could never be enough. Setting one day aside to give thanks seems to excuse the casual disregard for our blessings that seems rampant the remaining 364. To be truly thankful, you must be cognizant of your blessings at all times. You must cherish the simple things in life. You must learn to appreciate the vast resources around you - every precious second of time, or scrap of food, or opportunity to grow and be productive. It means making sure that the people you love, know and feel that love each and every day. It means sharing your blessings freely with those who are less fortunate. It means understanding that God's mercy is all around you, always - even when you don't understand its manifestations.

Perhaps this year, after the tragedies of Sept. 11, Americans will feel more sincere in their thankfulness on Nov. 22. I don't doubt that the emotions will be real; time spent with family and friends is never wasted. The point of it all will be missed entirely, however, if the sentiment is exhausted before the week runs out. This year I will pray that more of us work to be thankful Nov. 23 and beyond!
